Conversation with Anna

By Ann's sister, Lynne

The hikes which gave you so much pleasure. Especially with Cassie!

These are the important memories we leave to those we love, not material stuff.

A sense of adventure and fun was something we shared .

Remember going to see Evita after we'd shopped all day in London? And the two guys who sat next to us? We thought they were flirting with us but came to realise that they were a very happy couple!! We just needed to get out more!

I don't have words to express my gratitude to both you and Jimmy for taking care of Mum and Dad. They were an extremely loving couple, if understated, and you and Jimmy exemplified that spirit.

Possessions never meant a thing to you because you cared about all the truly important qualities - paying your debts off in full and immediately (How much were the farm eggs Dad?)

Watching the buds fill out in the garden and then seeing that first Camelia bloom, or proudly presenting the tomatoes from the greenhouse, or watching the seagulls swoop down for their bacon bits!

Oh Anna, I love and miss you so much, but I'm glad you are no longer suffering.

You remained brave and proud to the end.

And now you are part of my being, forever.

I am, your incredibly grateful baby sister,
Lynne
