Remembering Barbara

A POEM BY BARBARA
Read by Granddaughter Sacha

CAPTIVE
The white owl sat upon a branch, Upon a silver tree,
And gazed with an unblinking stare of luminosity,
At moving shapes in dappled light within the silent air.
But were the images he saw the ones that were not there?
Of noiseless flight, pulsating life within the captured prey.
The raging battle nightly fought, to see another day.
With freedom gone, survival now is not necessity.
The white owl sat upon a branch upon a silver tree.

REFLECTION
Ed Sheeran - Supermarket Flowers

Time for family and friends to lay a flower on the coffin and pay their respects if they so wish

WORDS OF FAREWELL
Acker Bilk - Stranger on the shore

(Curtains will close at the end of the track)

BLESSING

We give thanks for the life of Barbara. Today, we do not mourn but celebrate all she achieved and the legacy she leaves behind. We will remain ever grateful for being blessed with her presence, and the light she shone into so many lives and hearts. We will treasure her and all she stood for, cherishing the memories we have that shall never fade.
