A Dance with the Reaper (A Terry Pratchett Epigraph)

In a land where the hourglass tips,
No one is actually dead until the ripples they cause in the world die away,
Death steps lightly, as time slips.

It is said that your life flashes before your eyes just before you die,
A final moment's serenade, a glimpse of everything you've forgotten to say.

Don't think of it as dying, just think of it as leaving early
To avoid the rush,
Where silence reigns and shadows unfurl.
There is no justice. There is just me,
In the end, where all must hush.

It is a terrible thing to find the ones you love still held within the world of the living,
While you, a shade, drift beyond the sun,
The trouble with having an open mind, of course, is that people will insist on coming along
With their clumsy feet, while your journey's just begun.

Time is a drug. Too much of it kills you,
But in those last breaths, you get what everyone gets, you get a lifetime,
And no one is finally dead until the ripples they cause in the world die away,
Until the final grain of sand slips, and the clock ceases to chime.
