MAYBE IT'S BECAUSE I AM LONDONER

'Maybe it's because I'm a Londoner
That I love London so
Well, maybe it's because I'm a Londoner
That I think of her wherever I go

I get a funny feeling inside of me
While walking up and down
Well, maybe it's because I'm a Londoner
That I love the London town ...

My Nan– 'Sally'

For me personally my life will never be the same. There will be void in my heart that can never be filled.

Sally was my grandmother, but she was also someone I greatly respected and admired. My Nan was assertive and was a Londoner always in her heart. She would always stand up for her family and her love of horse racing and tennis will live on in my mind as a memory of her.

A piece of me died the day she suddenly passed and there will be a massive void now in my life that can never be filled. I am lucky enough to have spent many years with her by my side as she watched me grow into the woman I am today.

She was always there during my childhood, and I am grateful for all the time I spent with her especially being there for her when she needed me. Nan experienced great loss and heartache when she lost her beloved husband of 59 years Joe in 2010 and again when her chocolate Labrador Josie passed away in 2019.

I tried in every way I could to make life the best it could be for her in care. She even moved from another care home to St Brendan's last July so she could be happy and comfortable in her final years. I will always remember how you face lit up when I gave you a soft toy Rudolf last Christmas Eve . I know she had made friends there and I am grateful to people who took the time to get to know her.

Nan, I am so lucky to have had you in my life. You and Pops were loving grandparents and I love you both more than words can ever say.
I will always be proud to say I am and will always be your granddaughter Louise.
